office. Although the postal business has increased largely, this was 10,815 pieces less than in the year before. The decrease is gratifying, but the still large number of careless users of the mails is anything else but gratifying. Nobody should think it too much trouble to address mail matter correctly and legibly. If everybody did this the dead letter office would be much less important than it is.

Thanksgiving day. Those who did not understand the mysteries of left tackle, quarter back, half back and full back, ould appreciate the beauty of twenty two stout young fellows kicking a ball, rushing, driving, knocking down and dragging out all over the field, in immi nent danger of their lives.

One of the players was taken off the field with a broken knee-cap and a snapped ligament in the ankle, but the game and the howling and tooting of of horns went on just the same. The crowd was for Yale, but the game wen to Princeton. The Presbyterians did not let the Blue score a point. College foot-ball on a big day is physicial exercise with a vengeance.

The survivors of this course of training should be strong men, able to bear their share of the burdens of life.

Postmuster General Wanamaker's as nual report is unlike anything of the kind put out by any of his predecessors. There are no fine phrases in it. The Postmaster General writes as though he were talking to his associates in busi ness, outlining with an air of authority a new plan for making the business more

The report is business from the start Instead of congratulating the country en the proud achievements of the Postoffice Department, he plunges into the thing that is on his mind, and that is the fundamental weakness of his department. He shows why this weakness exists and how it is to be remedied. He recommends as though he had no thought of the rejection of recommenda thought of the rejection of recommendations so obviously good.

He complains that the Postmaster General and the First Assistant are overloaded with details when they ought to have an oportunity to think out and execute plans to promote the efficiency of the service. Besides looking to 2,600 Presidential offices, the Postmaster General must receive all sorts of delegations on all sorts of business, and particularly his ear must be open to Senstors and Representatives in Congress. He must consider complaints of overy description, keeping him "continually in the deep drudgery of each day's recurring duties, and with but little opportunity to attend to anything beyond routine work."

The First Assistant Postmaster General must do much of the same character, besides looking after 58,000 postoffices and all the details involved in them.

and all the details involved in them. The other Assistants are hampered in the same way. Postmaster General Wanamaker would create the office of Fourth Assistant Postoffice General, to take immediate charge of the railway When she had Children, she gave them Castoria, mail, the foreign mail, the money-order office, the registry and supply divisions, and the dead-letter office, and he thinks this officer would always have his hands

This is not all be recommends. He would create another and still more important office, to be filled by the highest grade man, appointed for ten years at a salary of $10,000 a year. This officer would be "the man of details of the Deparament, inspiring the whole service with promptness and zeal." He would have nothing to do with politics or parties. The place should be so secure and so desirable that it would be the ambition of every man in the service to fit himself to fill it. The Postmaster General gives some idea of the work he has cut out for this "man of details";

crai gives some idea of the work he has cut out for this "man of details";

To this Controller or General Secretary would be referred slid the plans of improvements determined upon the plans of improvements and an elementary of the plans of improvements and an elementary in the city of behavior for the city of behavior of more stating under the present combersone and are tiquated withouts. He would give right of the city of benever more than two deliveries a day he would have given thin or in the city of benever more than two deliveries and the city of benever more than two deliveries and the city of the city of benever more than two deliveries and the city of the city

John Wanamaker has made a great ccess of a vast business because he has it thoroughly organized in every branch, one "man of details" for all, a man of details for every department. His keen business eye sees the lack of thorough organization in the Postoffice Department, and he is ready with his plan to supply the missing links. His ideas are original, as they relate to a department of the Government, strongly put, and will make Congress think,

This is what Wanamaker has been doing while opposition organs and poli cians have been abusing him. Are here any more John Wanamakers for Uncle Sam to get hold of?

"A few days before the election a little ncident happened which mortified me deeply," said a business man to the "It happened in this way," he ontinued. "You see, I had some business to transact with one of the candidates for Legislature, and, as it was something important, I was forced to go out to his house to see him. It was quest to be a him. It was quest he had gone to bed. At any rate the servant who opened the door showed me into the parlor to wait for his master. I was obliged to wait some time, and while doing this I amused myself looking at the pictures and other ornaments about the room. On the centre table, among books and other bricarbac, stood a big fancy decanter filled with liquor which looked like whisky. It was a curious looking decanter, and on one side was some laucy lettering if which I could not make out. Being if which I could not make out. Being trather curious to find out what it said I hited the decanter up from the table and tipped it up so that the light fell on the lettering. It said: "If you touch me I'll tell."

world is the Imperial, now at the Paris Exposition. It was so named by the Prince of Wales. It is owned by a syndicate, who have offered it for sale at £200,000—one million of dollars! It is syndicate, who have offered it for sale at 2200,000—one million of dollars! It is still the property of the syndicate. Two years ago in London the syndicate offered the stone to me in the rough at that figure, and wanted me to bring it over to New York and try to sell it on a large commission. But I didn't think of any New Yorker who wanted to pay a million dollars for astone!

That was and is the greatest price, commercially speaking, that any diamond was ever offered for, so far as I know. That great gem is an African stone, of course. South America is at present the world's diamond supply depot, as Golconda was in the days when the Kohinoor and other great Indian gems drew the world's gyes castward. An occasional diamond is still being found in Brazil, but the product in that country is not now sufficient to make it a regular factor in the market.

The Imperial is now cut and weight of any cut stone in the world. It was cut either in London or Amsterdam—I forget which—and is unexceptional in color and brilliancy.

and we need not count as lost all the pleasure of life when the wife and mother, upon whom the happiness of home so largely depends, is afflicted with the delicate diseases peculiar to women. It is terrible to contemplate the misery existing in our midst because of the prevalence of these diseases. It is high time that all wemen should know that there is one sure remedy for all female complaints, and that is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Do not allow illmale complaints, and that is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Do not allow ill-health to fasteu itself upon you. Ward it off by the use of this standard remedy. But if it has already crept in, put it to rout. You can do it, by the use of the "Favorite Prescription." It is guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be returned.

For biliousness, sick headache, digestion, and constipation, take Dr. Pierce's Pellets.
